

SAMUEL L. BLUMENFELD

73 Bishops Forest Drive Waltham, MA 02452

781-899-6468 slblu123@verizon.net

June 2, 2008

Joseph Farah
Box 368
Catharpin, VA 20143

Dear Joseph,

My new book on the Shakespeare authorship question, The Marlowe-Shakespeare Connection, has just been published and promises to cause a bit of a stir among those thousands of Shakespeare fans who question whether or not the Bard actually wrote the works attributed to him.

Apparently, the subject has so much entertainment value that Mark Skousen's Freedom Fest, being held in Las Vegas in July, is featuring a Shakespeare authorship debate between an Oxfordian and a Stratfordian.

It occurred to me that I could provide the passengers on your cruise ship with a lecture or series of lectures on the Shakespeare authorship issue. We have been so over-saturated with politics that I think my lecture would be a welcome respite.

Let me know if this idea appeals to you. I would welcome joining your cast of speakers to entertain and enlighten World Net Daily's intelligent readers.

Enclosed is a brochure about the book.

With best regards to you and Elizabeth,