

---

Kennedy's Foreign Policy

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES:

I am sick of listening to Senator Kennedy criticize Vice President Nixon on American foreign policy, as if the latter had been President for the last eight years.

While Mr. Nixon may be the Vice President, we cannot hold him accountable for every Castro that has risen up and every Laos that is threatened by communism. Neither have Messrs. Macmillan, de Gaulle, Nehru, or any other wise and distinguished world leader been able to do much better than President Eisenhower.

As far as I can recall Senator Kennedy's only major contribution to foreign policy has been a dangerous and sophomoric speech in the Senate urging us to betray our major ally France in favor of a minority faction of Algerian cut-throats.

If this is an example of the new foreign policy we can expect from Senator Kennedy should he be elected, then I say, God save America.

SAMUEL L. BLUMENFELD.

New York, Oct. 1, 1960.

---

August 18, 1961

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is deplorable that the Attorney General should waste the government's time and the taxpayer's money on persecuting several of the most productive and forward-looking drug firms in the country for the terrible crime of making too much money. Certainly Mr. Kennedy must know that at least half of those profits go into the government coffers to help pay for his salary as well as other sundry Washington expenses. Part of the other half goes to the stockholders, while the remaining segment is plowed back into the industry to help to produce more miracle drugs and refine production methods.

Would it not be of greater benefit to the taxpayer for Mr. Kennedy to turn his attention to the racketeers who pocket enormous sums and pay no taxes at all or the labor monopolies responsible for the strikes and slow downs at Cape Canaveral which have sabotaged our missile program and, in addition, made the taxpayer pay through the nose? Mr. Kennedy's Keynesian sense of justice is no justice at all!

Samuel L. Blumenfeld

111 East 26th Street
New York 10, N. Y.