Dear Mr. Blumenfeld:

Your analysis of The Draft in your December issue was splendid and absolutely to the point.

I wish, however, that you had touched upon what the primary objection to the draft is-- namely the moral issue. I have had some printed comment upon this in the past, but do not know where to put my hand upon it. By chance do you have a copy of the article by General Bonner Fellers on the draft? This is a tremendously effective comment by an outstanding patriot and authority.

Sincerely yours,

J. Evetts Haley

Dear Mr. Haley:

Thank you most kindly for your letter of February 23 with your complimentary comments concerning my article on The Draft.

The moral issue, as you say, is by far the most serious objection one could have to the draft. I hope you can find the printed comment on this issue you mentioned having. Since I intend to do further pieces on the draft, I'd love to quote from it. I have not seen General Bonner Fellers' article, but I shall try to get a copy of it.

It was indeed a great pleasure meeting you at Manitou Springs two summers ago. I remember your speech as a most moving experience.

With kindest regards,

Cordially,

Samuel I. Blumenthal
